FASHION SUNWEAR: PAST MEETS PRESENT

by Beth Schlau for VCPN

Who can't get enough of retro and vintage shapes in high-fashion sunwear? It's not just wayfarers and aviators that are all over frame boards, but cat eyes and butterflies too. But the difference is these shapes are being reinterpreted into modern designs, making it ever-so-chic to wear retro styles refashioned into contemporary silhouettes. Also starting to make more of an appearance are smaller eyesizes, particularly in sunglasses that are going to be Rx'ed. Colors are all over the place—ranging from classic neutrals to deep shades of blue, red, purple, green and translucent hues. Gradient lenses add a surefire panache to even the most basic black, spicing up the sunglasses; gradient frames are also becoming popular as are color combinations and temple prints and patterns. Regardless of your market, there's sure to be a fashion-forward sunglass for each of your patients.
